Narrative Therapy

Mad Libs

On Halloween, you get to go trick-or-treating! Everyone will dress up in costumes, like a/an SNOWSTORM or a/an SHOOTDOWN. This year, you decided to dress up as a/an EXOTIC GLIDER. Your mom takes you and your best friend trick-or-treating. While you are out, your dad stays at home and HANG. Other fun things to do on Halloween are TRUCKING scary movies and CLEANING. This year, you get lots of TACKY candy! When you get home, your dad says he wants some, because he works hard as a TEACHER and he deserves some of your CANDY CORN. You are HURT but you give it to him anyway. Dads are so TART but you love him!

Learning Objectives

Describe the efficacy of Narrative therapy as it applies to the treatment of trauma.

Use a therapeutic intervention based on Narrative therapy with a client.

Determine if Narrative therapy and its practice apply to his or her setting, clientele, and personal counseling philosophy.

Theory of Knowledge

- Where does Narrative Theory come from?
- Humanistic or Postmodern school of thought.
- Science does not provide concrete answers.
- Not necessary to remove a person's story from the greater narrative.

Dallos, 2022; Kwok, 2016; Liebrucks, 2001; Shakeri, et al., 2020; Strauss, 2009.

Theory of Change

- How does Narrative Therapy work?
- One big story
- Meaning
- Explicit and Implicit stories
- Mapping the core problem
- Untangling

If this was all you knew about Narrative Therapy, would it fit with your Worldview and your theory of counseling? And would you teach it?

Efficacy

- Group of addiction clients
- Addiction client's wives
- PTSD and social-related trauma experiences
- Creating separation and new meaning from past trauma

Think and Share

- Think: considering your location, practice, and clientele,
- Share: What clientele could you see yourself using this theory with?
- How could emerging counselors benefit from this?

Interventions

- Questions
- Letter writing
- Re-story
- Externalization
- Deconstructing the Problem
- Mapping
